

Runaway Negro JACK.

Ran away from the subscriber, living in Pomkey Neck, Charles county, Maryland, on the 15th of last June, a Negro man named JACK, about 50 years of age, and about 5 feet 10 or 11 inches high, full and well made, his voice in common loud, and bold in his looks and manner. I don't know any thing that would make a stranger suspect Jack's elopement more than that of calling himself a Baptist, and that of argument.

JACK came from Guinea when he was about 12 or 13 years of age. There is a fear on the back of one of his hands occasioned by a burn, while an infant, it must be discovered by strict notice; each of his thumbs are flame-colored about 4 or 5 inches in length and better than an inch broad in different places.

Whoever brings said Jack home, or catches him in jail that I get him again, shall receive Twenty Dollars for the first 20 miles, Thirty Dollars for 30 miles, or Forty Dollars for 40 miles, and One Shilling for each mile after, and reasonable charges paid by

RICHARD BRANDT.

May 30.
The above Negro Jack eloped from me better than twelve months past, and was brought home by one of Judge Washington's overseers, with a pass and recommendation signed by Thomas Teat, Middle River Neck, Baltimore county, dated May 29, 1805. Jack then called himself Thomas Harris.

PESTALOZZI.

A general account of the METHOD pursued by him.

(Translated from the work of Dr. Chavannes.)

"Pestalozzi has given the name of method to his new plan of instruction, as it is not so much the subject, as the mode or manner of instruction, in which his plan differs from any hitherto adopted.

"This method embraces all those elementary or primary means, by the aid of which the powers of the human mind may be the most naturally developed. It is the result of deep reflection on the progress of nature, from the moment that the infant, opening its eyes to the light, begins to combine the materials which are to serve as the foundation of all his future knowledge.

"These elementary materials are furnished by the impressions which it receives from exterior objects, and here it would be difficult to form an idea of the prodigious number of various sensations, which the infant can receive and retain, with scarcely any assistance from art. In truth, the multiplicity of objects which are forced upon its notice, produces an absolute chaos in its feeble brain. Insensibly, however, the impressions produced by the objects familiar to it, acquire more correctness; by degrees he learns to hear, to feel, to taste, to touch, and above all he learns to see; he begins to distinguish objects, he forms an idea of their size and their number. At the same time he begins to feel a wish or impulse to impart to others what he feels himself; soon after the organ of speech develops itself, and he seeks to give names to all the objects which surround him.

"With the aid of the signs of language his sensations acquire from day to day more precision; because, discovering each day new properties in the objects which fall under his senses, language furnishes him, at the same time, a new denomination for each of these properties. At last, these first impressions, produced by existing objects, develop in his soul the faculty of rising to still higher operations. Insensibly the presence of the object is no longer necessary in order to give him the sensation of it; by a simple act of his will, his imagination can retrace, and his memory recall it; he sees by the eyes of understanding, he can trace its form, he can determine its proportions; he compares, he judges, he reasons. He is no longer that feeble being who, in the first days of its existence, appeared inferior to the brute; he is the chef d'oeuvre of creation upon earth; he is MAN.

"Such is the progress of nature, such the guide Pestalozzi wishes to follow. His numerous observations have convinced him; first, that the intellectual powers of the infant need only to be developed in a sure and certain manner, to elevate them to the highest degree which man can attain; secondly, that the little success hitherto obtained, must be attributed to the feebleness and inconsistency of the foundations on which the different systems of instruction have been raised; but, particularly, to the little attention which has been paid, to give to the first impressions received in infancy, a direction conformable to the indications furnished by nature.

"He has assiduously sought for the surest and most simple method to give this direction to the infant mind, and to harmonize the instructions of man with those of nature. But to accomplish this we must commence with the true elementary or primary principles; we must lay hold of the first operations of nature upon the mind of the infant, in order to subject them to rules which may remove the errors, and supply the deficiencies in the perceptions of this early period; these rules should be general, and adapted to the inferior as well as higher classes of society.

"After long continued researches, and many experiments, Pestalozzi is convinced that the first distinct ideas produced in the mind, by exterior objects, were the result of the observations the child naturally made on their form, and their number, connected with the knowledge it had acquired of their name and most striking qualities. These are, in truth, the first things which he tries to learn. When he sees an object that is new to him, he demands the NAME; he tries to approach in order to touch it; when it is possible he lays hold of it, turns it over and over again, examines its dimensions; in a word studies its form, and if he discovers many separate parts, each successively attracts his attention; the moment he can notice an object in these three relations, NAME, FORM and NUMBER, he begins to have a distinct idea of it, which is sufficient until he is able to study its other properties. To attend in these different respects to the first impressions of the child, to give him rules or principles in harmony with these first acts of his intelligence, is to go hand in hand with nature, to guide him in the true path, and is the most certain method of developing his intellectual powers.

"It is then to these three elementary points, name, form and number, that Pestalozzi has thought best to restrict himself in the method which he applies to the instruction of early childhood.

"This work, which he entitles The Method, is divided in three parts; first, The manual of mothers, which is confined simply to the intuition (or perception) and denomination of the principal objects in nature and art, by which the child is surrounded.

"The second, is destined to instruction in relation to numbers.

"The third, to instruction in relation to forms and dimensions.

"The essential point to which all the labors of Pestalozzi are directed, is to the development of the intellectual powers of the infant from the very first step he takes in the career of life. To gain this end, he has sought to render his method such, that the care of its application may be confided, during the first years, to mothers themselves, wishing thus to seize the instant when the infant shows the first signs of intelligence, and above all, to avoid giving a false direction to the first development of its faculties, a direction which would infallibly influence all the instruction afterwards given; and for this purpose, he addresses himself to those whom nature so manifestly destined to be their first guides. He exhibits to mothers what they may do at that period, when the infant whom they have carried in their wombs, whom they have nourished with their milk, loves only them, smiles alone for them, listens alone to them. Hence it is to them that he dedicates the first branch of his system, which is confined to the intuition & simple denomination of the principal objects in nature and art, by which they are surrounded. The Manual of Mothers is then destined to trace out for parents the path they should follow, in order to teach their children the first elements of their future knowledge, to analyze their first sensations, to distinguish them by those signs of language which are most proper to determine their nature, and to fix them firmly in the mind; or, in other terms, to show parents how they may teach children to see with correctness the objects which surround them, and to express themselves in regard to what they see, in a clear and intelligible manner.

"In addressing himself to mothers, and thus confiding to them the first instruction of their children, he seeks to render their task as easy as possible; he believes he has so well explained and simplified his plan, that mothers of the inferior classes in society will be enabled to practise it in all its extent, and in the midst of their daily occupations.

"The progress and manner of instruction laid down in the MANUAL of MOTHERS as well as in the other parts of his METHOD, is so exactly fitted to the development of the intellectual faculties of man, all is so connected, so consistent, the truths which are presented flow so naturally and necessarily one from another, the minutest details are so distinctly traced that any mother who understands her duties, may follow the different exercises are, in fact, only a conversation with her child, which she may keep up at any hour of the day, and, I may venture to add, during any occupation whatever; she may begin it in the house, and continue it in her walks; in fact, so little is here demanded on the part of the instructor, the progress is so plainly traced, that the mother of a numerous family may in a little while teach her eldest to be the instructors of her youngest children.

An inappreciable advantage in the Manual of Mothers, is that there is always the closest connection between the word and the thing.

"One of the greatest difficulties teachers find, is that of making themselves understood. The most simple things often require long and tiresome definitions, and after all remain unintelligible to the pupil, who has no just idea of the terms in which they are conveyed. The Manual of Mothers is designed particularly to remove this evil.

"In early familiarizing the child to the various objects and operations in nature and art, it engraves on the memory, at the same time, the true signs of language, or the most appropriate terms which serve to recall them. The instructor who shall receive a child thus prepared, will find a firm foundation on which to build, and will not meet with those deficiencies which it is so difficult, and oftentimes impossible to supply, when the proper mode has been neglected; and surely the children themselves, children naturally so eager after knowledge, will be more sensible of the happiness of existence; when they find their intellectual powers unfold themselves without difficulty, the sphere of their ideas enlarge, and their activity continually supplied with new objects for its exercise, may we not hope to see their love and duty each day augment towards their mother, towards the instructress who made them acquainted with themselves, with nature, and Nature's God; and may we not likewise hope to see them filled with the highest veneration for the author of all those marvellous works, which their studies lead them to examine; and with such sentiments can we have any fear of their moral principles?"

* This work is printed in German, and is now, we are informed, about being translated into French.

AFRICA.

ALGERS, Feb. 23.—The spirit of revolution which has announced itself in this country with such terrible symptoms does not seem to be entirely stifled. It is known that Tremecen has been delivered up to the horrors of a pillage, in which two hundred Jews perished. A few executions stopped the troubles ready to be renewed. A woman accused of having propagated seditious rumors, was cast into the sea; at present the town is quiet, but the minds of the soldiers in the barracks are still agitated; it is even asserted that a conspiracy had been formed there, and that several Turks, convicted of being concerned in it were strangled.

In the mean time the regency has been the theatre of agitations of another kind. Mr. Cartwright, the English consul, set all the springs at work of intrigue and corruption to detach the Dey from the particular affection he bears to France in the person of the emperor. He distributed presents to all the grandees, to the men in office and even to the lowest spies of his regency. Shortly after the battle of Trafalgar, he officially announced that the British had gained a victory in which the admirals of the two fleets were killed. But these pretended advantages and the presumption with which he displayed them, were unable to regain him the favor he had lost, and in consequence of discussions which took place three days after, relative to the French consul the Dey ordered Mr. Cartwright to be driven out of his palace, by a tchaouk.

However, the British consul, still untired with humiliations or intrigues, did not renounce his hopes. His projects tended to nothing less than to bring the three regencies into the coalition, and to get possession of the trade of Algiers, by establishing armed factories at Bonne and Oran, to arrive at this result, all measures are eligible for the English agent, and he was powerfully seconded by his government. It was exactly at the moment when the immortal emperor of the French was entering Germany at the head of his grand army, that Cartwright redoubled his efforts; and it cannot be denied that, protected by the all powerful Aga, he had for some time great advantage. Succours in men, in warlike stores, and provisions, were carried by English armaments to the fortress of Oran, besieged by the rebels (*); presents were distributed to all the grandees of the regency; a considerable sum was promised to the Aga, if he resolved on the measures proposed against France and Spain; in fine two commanders of frigates were sent here to congratulate the Dey upon his accession to the throne, and offer him presents proportioned to the importance of the determination solidified. These two commanders even positively asserted that the Grand Signior and Prussia had united their arms to those of Austria and Russia against France, and that the Emperor of the French had already met with considerable losses upon the Rhine.

This news, guaranteed in the most solemn manner supported by the charms of seduction and by odious rumors spread against the French charge d'affaires, placed the life of the latter in the utmost danger at the time of the dreadful pillage exercised over the unfortunate Jews.

More authentic and more certain information together with the death of the Aga, which happened at that interval, suddenly disconcerted the intrigues of the English consul. A few days previous to the death of the Aga, the dey had convoked a divan at the marine, which the French and English charge d'affaires were invited to attend. The purpose of this assembly was to discuss the complaints lodged against the practices of the English off Bonnet. The French consul general and charge d'affaires arriving from the country where he had received this invitation, learned that the English consul was already two hours at the marine, and had taken the place of honor next the admiral, to obtain over him the precedence which was granted by the ancient and new treaties to the French envoys over all the others, and in a private conversation which he had with the dey he expatiated at large on the tyranny which the English agents were endeavoring to exercise in all governments. The dey listened to him with great attention, was struck, above all, when the French consul unveiled to him the intrigues of the cabinet of St. James's at Constantinople, to bring the grand Seigneur into the deplorable state which his power has fallen into. The dey gave orders at Bonne, conformably to the desires of the French consul.

* The English consul at present claims 50,000 Spanish dollars for this object. But the dey answers that he acquitted that sum by restoring 25 Maltese slaves.

This conference may be considered as the period of the absolute fall of the consideration of the English consul with the regency. A few days after, the death of the Aga bereft him of an accomplice and a powerful protector. He tried in vain by presents, flattery and intrigues, his usual resources, to resume the favor which he had lost. These means turned against himself. Prostrate at the feet of the grandees of Algiers, he even fatigued them with his baseness; he meddled in the affairs of the country, made exaggerated claims for Jews whom he caused to wear the English cockade. The dey began to desire him to present himself before him only for the affairs which concerned the government, and which could not be treated by the organ of his drogoman. Mr. Cartwright paying little attention to this warning, presented himself again, and the dey was obliged to order him to be refused admission at the gate of the palace, and at length have him turned away by a tchaouk.

According to an immemorial custom, at the festivals of Bayram, all the foreign consuls repair in a corps to the palace to salute the dey and the grandees of the regency. A few days before, the dey had given orders not to let in the English consul, who had the prudence not to present himself, and the customary presents, which he got shamefully delivered by a janissary, were sent him back.

Nevertheless, this English agent, who affected the greatest haughtiness towards the agents of the other nations, and who called himself consul of the consuls, had obtained through intrigues under the power of the Aga, the country house of the unfortunate Dey Mustapha. It is a very handsome palace situate at some distance and to the eastward of the tower, commanding the whole road; even in Europe it would be a very remarkable monument. The Dey sent him orders to quit it. Mr. Cartwright caused several steps to be taken by a few partisans he had left, in order to avoid this new humiliation; but the dey remained inflexible & the British agent was obliged to cause his furniture to be removed in the utmost haste. He still, however, left the pole of the flag standing; but the regency caused it to be taken down. A few days afterwards, the Dey made an offer of this country house to the French consul, who thanked him for the favor, but alleged that he had another; the Dey, however, insisted, saying that he was determined that the charge des affaires of the emperor of France should have a suitable residence, and sent him the keys by a tchaouk. The flag of his majesty the emperor and king have continued floating on it since that period.

After his return to the town, the London consul shut himself up in his house, which he did not quit for fear of being insulted by the vilest of the populace. He did not even see any of the other consuls. Another circumstance complicated the disgrace and ended by causing Mr. Cartwright to be sent off. It deserves to be developed.

From four to five hundred Portuguese prisoners were in slavery, and the Spanish consul was to be appointed to ransom them. But Mr. Cartwright, wishing to take this negotiation into his own hands, had, in conjunction with some officers, caused the dispositions of the court of Lisbon to be changed. The prisoners seeing the contempt in which the English consul was held wished to intrust their interest to the French consul. But Mr. Cartwright's intrigues had suspended all negotiations. Thus, whilst the protection of the emperor of the French caused all French subjects to be gratuitously ransomed, whilst even the Sardinians who had slaves for twenty years, such as Granara, and Theresa Calderoni, French consul's intervention, got their chains, for the fourth of their ransom; the consul of a power calls itself the sovereign of the seas, and the subjects of an ally to laugue the horrors of slavery, and even offered the efforts which the French consul making to redeem them!

In short, after this affair had been delayed several months, owing to the situation it met with from the English, an advice boat arrived here on January, by which the Spanish consul that a Portuguese squadron consisted of two sail of the line, two frigates and were at Alicante and might be expected here every instant, in order to exact peace and ransom 500 slaves who were at Algiers. On the 30th, signals were for the Portuguese division being in the road, with the flag of truce hoisted. The consul of Spain immediately had on board, but the very moment the division appeared, Mr. Cartwright sent a small English privateer which sailed towards it. After some conversation taken place between the captains of the privateer and the Portuguese squadron, the latter tacked about.

The regency presumed that the English consul, who had for a long time been intriguing both here and at Lisbon in order to be charged with this negotiation; that his attempts for that purpose baffled, had hastened to break it off, and gave advice to the Portuguese command that three of the regency's corsairs on the point of coming into port as a large Portuguese merchantman recently taken by the rai's Ahmeda. The seeing the following morning that the Portuguese division had disappeared from the most violent passion, called the English consul a spy, and said that he be beheaded, were any accident to the Algerine corsairs at sea, even he sure that not a stone would be thrown at him.

Mr. Cartwright, having been informed of the disposition of the dey, sent his brother (for his drogoman and janissary have been taken away from him) to an audience of the dey, in order to pardon for his conduct. The prince ed that as long as he was dey of Algiers he would never behold, even at a distance the face of a man unworthy of representing a government. Mr. Cartwright then sent a boat after the Portuguese, who were beating about at sea for several days, out coming up with them, it returned. The three corsairs are also with the Portuguese prize which was selling at Tangiers. By an American vessel which came into this harbor a few days since, and which had spoken with the regency, the regency has been informed that they were cruising to the eastward of Algiers, and were to return here as the weather permitted. They had, however, made their appearance, and said they are returned to Gibraltar.

This affair would have rendered the of the English consul still more critical, a sloop dispatched by the government of Gibraltar, on the information received of Mr. Cartwright's position, arrived before Algiers on the 19th inst. The English consul went down to the marine to get on board, but the Vekilharji would suffer him to embark without permission of the Dey.

The captain of the sloop went to the palace with the American charge d'affaires when long explanations took place on the part of the English agent. The dey again sent a spy, and a man unworthy to represent a government. He declared that as long as he was dey of Algiers no consideration should induce him to treat with Mr. Cartwright.

New attempts were in vain made following morning to induce the Dey to adopt favorable sentiments towards Mr. Cartwright and to avoid a new humiliation from the government. The Dey required that Mr. Cartwright should quit the residence, and he embarked with all his property on the English sloop, the commander of which was furnished with 13 guns.

[N. Y. Barometer.]

We learn by Captain Fitzgerald, in 20 days... from Santa Domingo, that a Spanish schooner had...
just arrived there from Lagaira, on her passage...
had been boarded by two Spanish government... brigs, which had been dispatched, (after the cap... ture of Miranda's two schooners) in pursuit of...
the Leander. The above schooner had two men... pressed by one of the brigs, by which means this... information was received. There now no longer... remains a doubt about the capture of the two...
schooners which Miranda chartered at Jacquewel... to further his designs against the Spaniards. As...
to the news of the execution of the crews of the...
schooners, we have only to observe, that it may...
be true; but it rests on mere report at Curacao...
which report may have no other origin than con... jecture.

The expedition of General Miranda, has, thus... far, proved unfavorable; but, after the loss of...
part of his force, and finding it unsafe to remain... in the midst of danger, the probability is, that...
he has shaped his course for Trinidad, to solicit... the co-operation of the British.

While we are on the subject of General Mi... randa's expedition, we shall notice another arti... cle of intelligence which has just come to our... knowledge. It is, that on his arrival off Bar... celona, he wrote a letter to his brother on shore... advising him of his intention, and requesting...
his mother and sister, to retire into the interior... and to take with them the most valuable of their... property. Miranda's brother was alarmed, and...
left he should be suspected of being concerned in...
the enterprise or favoring the views of his bro... ther, he hastened to the governor general at Ca... racas with the letter. An immediate alarm was... excited, and vessels were dispatched in pursuit of...
Miranda. The capture of his two schooners was...
the result.

We also learn, that after the engagement the...
Leander flopped two days off Bonaire, repairing... her rigging, and put to sea; since which she has...
not been heard of. [N. Y. paper.]

THE EPISTLE
FROM
THE YEARLY MEETING,
HELD IN LONDON,
By adjournments, from the twenty second to...
the thirty first of the fifth month, eighteen... hundred and five inclusive.

To the quarterly and monthly meetings of... friends, in Great Britain, Ireland and...
elsewhere.

DEAR FRIENDS,

WE trust that, through...
the continued mercy and assistance of the...
head of the church, we have not met in...
vain in this our annual assembly; because...
in contemplating the present state of our re... ligious society, we have been enabled to...
attend to various subjects in which its...
welfare is involved, with calm deliberation... with the warmth of love, and with much... harmony of mind. Some of the views... which have at this time opened before us...
we shall briefly attempt to unfold to you...
saluting you, as we cordially do, in the...
love of our gracious and holy redeemer &... preserver. Friends, on all occasions, in eve... ry strait, in heights & in depths, seek him... retire to him; let the advancement of his...
cause be your primary pursuit; and count...
it as a privilege inestimable, to be number... ed among his lowly minded followers.

We have received epistles from all the...
yearly meetings of our North American... brethren; also one from Ireland. On the...
American Continent, our friends appear, in...
their collective capacity, to be steadily pur... suing the path of apprehended duty, in the...
cause of righteousness; and, amidst all the...
discouragement which they as well as we...
in this land, have met with, from cruel a... rice, in pleading the cause of the oppress... ed Africans, it still lies near to their hearts...
and a firm, forcible, yet cool remonstrance...
on behalf of that people, has been not long... since presented to the general legislative bo... dy of the American states. The dismal... subject of the slave trade, the source of ac... cumulating misery to Africa, of accumulat... ing guilt to Britain, and of continued re... proach to the holy religion, which in com... mon with our countrymen, we profess has...
also claimed our sympathies in this meeting...
and we desire our friends may be individu... ally prompt to entertain for these our fel... low men the sensations of pity, which on... various occasions may arise. Where, friends... shall we find a juster cause of regret, than to see a nation professing christi... anity, pouring forth from her harbours... numerous equipments, not designed to im... prove and exalt, but to degrade, enslave...

and consign to misery, those very nations...
to which, in recompence for ages of inju... ry and insult, she owes the benefits of bro... therly kindness, and christian example!

The usual accounts which we have recei... ved from the several Quarterly Meet... ings in Great Britain, denote that all are...
not steadily concerned to walk as becomes... the simplicity of our profession. We have...
been introduced into concern of mind on...
this account, and have endeavored to ad... minister some remedy for the complaint;...
but we desire also to acknowledge, that we...
find room for encouragement in the num... ber of lively and judicious friends still...
preserved and qualified for labor, and of...
others (thanks to the Shepherd and Bishop... of souls) still arising from among our be... loved youth. To both these we would...
say, hold on your way, and may your...
hands be strong, as your reward is sure.

The amount of sufferings this year in...
Great Britain and Ireland is ten thousand... eight hundred and eleven pounds. Dem... ands of a military nature have occasioned... about sixteen hundred pounds of it; and...
one friend has borne his testimony by su... ffering three months imprisonment.

Now, dear Friends, hear, we beseech... you, the word of exhortation. What hin... ders the advancement of our society in its...
Christian progress; seeing the holy High...
Priest of our profession is willing to lead... us to complete sanctification? What, but...
the carnal mind, operating in various and... in specious forms? We do not tax all who...
embark in large concerns in trade, with an...
undue desire after riches; but we much...
fear that the effect, which their schemes... are likely to have upon themselves and...
their connexions, as affecting their condi... tion both religious and civil, is not duly... regarded. The love of money is said in... scripture to be the root of all evil; and we...
believe it may be shown, that honest in... dustry and moderation of desire are roots... of incalculable benefit to the humble Chris... tian. We feel for many of our friends in... limited circumstances, in this day of in... creased, and possibly increasing expence...
but we would caution such, and particular... ly those who are setting out in life, against...
imitating the manner of living of those... whose means are more abundant.

We wish, Friends, to call you, not... to penuriousness, but to economy; and we...
particularly desire that all such as have fa... milies of children, even in more affluent... circumstances, would insure them to early... industry, and not to habits of depending...
too much on the services of domestics.

For this latter and useful class, we also...
desire to plead, and to request those who...
have the privilege of ability to employ...
them, to sympathise with them in their la... bors, to delight to render them happy, and...
even to seek for that disposition that can...
lead them along as fellow-travellers in the... road to the city of God. Various are the...
means by which this may be attempted.

The principal one certainly is, the keeping... of the mind attentive to the discoveries of...
truth; but seeing, we doubt not, that a... perusal of the scriptures is the frequent... employ of many families, we desire that...
the servants may be made partakers of the... benefits resulting from the practice, and...
from occasional opportunities of retirement... in spirit. Indeed we are afresh engaged... to press upon friends a diligent acquaint... ance with the sacred Records, and a diligent... endeavor to store the minds of their tender... offspring with the great truths of Chris... tian redemption. In so doing, you may...
implant, in the susceptible and retentive... minds of your children, principles of pre... servation against the temptations of future... life; and resemble those of old time, who...
smitten with the power and goodness of...
the Lord of life and glory, when person... ally on earth, are said to have brought, with...
divine approbation, little children to Christ.

Thus imbued with a knowledge of the won... derful effects of heavenly love which the e... vangelists relate, they will be prepared also...
to receive his spiritual appearance in their...
hearts, according to our holy profession;...
as well as duly to appreciate, and delight... in the records of the christian faith and... practice of our pious predecessors. With... their history also we think it important... that our youth should be more acquainted... than we fear many are. It is a history aboun... ding with examples of what the love of...
Christ is able to effect, in doing, or in su... ffering. It is a practical comment on the...
words of the great apostle:

"Who shall separate us from the love... of Christ? Shall tribulation or distress... or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or...
peril, or sword?" "Nay, in all these...
things we are more than conquerors, thro'... him that loved us. For I am persuaded that neither death nor life, nor angles, nor... principalities, nor powers, nor things pre... sent, nor things to come, nor height, nor...

depth, nor any other creature, shall be...
able to separate us from the love of God...
which is in Christ Jesus our Lord."—
Rom. viii. 35, 37, 39.

On the calamitous subject of war, we do not... feel much now to say. Friends, you are not ig... norant of what adorns our profession, with re... spect to this subject. Only this would we say... make it not a topic of conversation. Guard... against placing your dependence on fleets and ar... mies; be peaceable yourselves, in words and ac... tions; and pray to the Father of the universe...
that he would breathe the spirit of reconcilia... tion to the hearts of his erring and contending crea... tures.

Friends, seek peace and pursue it. Ye are cal... led to love. O that the smallest germ of enmi... ty may be eradicated from our enclosure! And...
verily there is a soil in which it cannot live; but... naturally withers and dies. This soil is Chris... tian humility: a state highly becoming and in... dispensable, for a being who depends continually... on the favour of his Lord; a state in which of all...
others he can most acceptably approach his pre... sence; and a state which naturally conducts him...
man to love and compassion, for the companions...
of his frailty and poverty, yet his fellow partak...
ers of the offered riches of the gospel.

Dear Friends, we believe that the Lord's... goodness is still towards his people; and that his...
language to them yet remains to be similar to...
that, which of old was conveyed by the prophet...
"O that there were such a heart in them that...
they would fear me, and keep all my com... mandments always; that it might be well with...
them, and with their children for ever!"— Deut. v. 29.

AGED about 15 years, and perhaps about 4 feet 6 inches high, with long bushy hair. Had on a frock made of country cloth, with a large black and white stripe. She ran away on the 4th of March, and is now probably in Alexandria or the City of Washington.

TO RENT,

And possession will be given the 20th May, A TWO STORY FRAME HOUSE, situated on Fairfax street, lately occupied by Mr. Davis, shoemaker. May 28.

N. B. I have just received a quantity of full inch thick Boards, of an excellent quality—and a quantity of three feet Shingles.

Runaway Negro JACK.

Ran away from the subscriber, living in Pomunkey Neck, Charles county, Maryland, on the 15th of last June, a Negro man, named JACK, about 50 years of age, and about 5 feet 10 or 11 inches high, luffy and well made, his voice in common loud, and bold in his looks and manner. I don't know any thing that would make a stranger suspect Jack's elopement sooner than that of calling himself a Baptist, and fond of argument.

JACK came from Guinea when he was about 12 or 13 years of age. There is a scar on the back of one of his hands occasioned by a burn or scald while an infant, it must be discovered by strict notice; each of his shins are flame colored about 4 or 5 inches in length and better than one inch broad in different places.

Whoever brings said Jack home, or secures him in jail that I get him again, shall receive Twenty Dollars for the first 20 miles, Thirty Dollars for 30 miles, or Forty Dollars for 50 miles, and One Shilling for each mile after, and reasonable charges paid by

RICHARD BRANDT.

May 30.

The above Negro Jack eloped from me better than twelve months past, and was brought home by one of Judge Washington's overseers, with a pass and recommendation signed by Thomas Tear, Middle River Neck, Baltimore county, dated May 23, 1805. Jack then called himself Thomas Harris.

Twenty Dollars Reward,

WILL be given for apprehending and securing in jail, a young mulatto man slave, named ANDREW. He was hired by me last year to Mr. Joseph Thomas, who keeps the mill die ferry opposite to Alexandria, and absconded from that place about the latter end of August last. He is about 23 years of age, 5 feet 8 or 9 inches high, luffy and well made, has short curled hair, and is frequently subject to have several large pimples in his face. He is reckoned to be a sensible fellow, of an easy agreeable address for a man in his low sphere of life. As he has not been heard of by me since his elopement, I suspect he has had the address to ship himself as a freeman on board some vessel either at Alexandria or Baltimore. Whoever takes him up and secures him in any jail, shall receive from me the above reward, as soon as due information thereof is given to me or to Doctor N. P. Canby, at Port Tobacco.
